Women Teacher's Day 2024

Savitribai Phule was the first woman teacher who worked tirelessly for women's education.

Savitribai Phule, born on January 3, 1831, in Maharashtra, was India's first woman teacher and a pioneer of women's education. Married at nine to Jyotirao Phule, she was educated by him and later became a social teacher. In 1847, she and her husband opened Pune's first school for Shudra girls, facing severe opposition. Despite harassment, she remained committed to education. She also fought against caste discrimination and child marriage, promoted widow remarriage, and established shelters for destitute women. During the 1896-97 plague, she tirelessly served the sick and succumbed to the disease in 1897. A poet and reformer, she authored Kavyaphule and advocated rationalism. Her contributions to education and social justice remain invaluable.
